In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when strength is declining the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability, and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and so feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force.

Moderate Terms, but Hard Fighting If you are conscious that your own objects are wholly altruistic, or that they are at least reasonable in the nature and extent of their self-seeking, it does not follow that you must make war in a moderate, inoffensive fashion. If the enemy were also altruistic or reasonable in his desires, it would be a monstrous thing to make-war upon him at all, because reasonable and generous nations must find peaceful ways to remove misunderstandings. We are at war with Germany_ because that nation is wrong both in the objects it pursues and in the methods by which it seeks to gain its ends. It stakes everything upon the use of force guided by such intelligence and skill as have never before been brought to for food, elsewhere beside on the manthe service of warfare. There is no ket. moderate course, therefore, to be pursued in meeting the German military organization. No argument can -now be used against German militarism but that of an adequate opposition expressed in terms of military efficiency. Germany proposes to achieve certain things for herself, regardless of the rights of others, by sheer power. This is a condition that cannot be met by argument or a display of sweet reasonableness. Either German force must be successfully opposed by force, or the world must reconcile itself in advance to the consequences of German victory.-From "The Progress of the World," in the

GROW BROILERS FOR MARKET

Early Cockerels Not intended for Breeders Should Be Fattened Up and Sold.

Early cockerels, unless kept for breeding purposes, are best sold for brollers or fryers.

On the average farm it is not practical, because of rush of work, to hatch chickens extremely early, hence they do not reach the market early enough in the spring to bring the best prices. The price, of course, depends upon the market and the demand.

Growing broilers for market is a specialized industry and is not always profitable. On the large markets broilers are classified as small, médium and large. They weigh from three-quarters of a pound to a pound and one-half

Young chickens as sold by farmers are frequently not properly fattened no attempt being made to get maximum returns. Confining broilers in crates holding from six to eight birds and feeding an exclusive diet of wet composed of cornmeal and wheat middlings mixed with sour milk or buttermilk the consistency of batter, gives best results, but broilers thus fattened lose weight quickly when shipped alive.

For the farmer this method is usually impracticable. A better method is that of confining young cockerels in groups of 25 to 30 in a small pen where their exercise is restricted. Feeding the birds cracked corn helps the quality of the meat and increases the weight considerably.

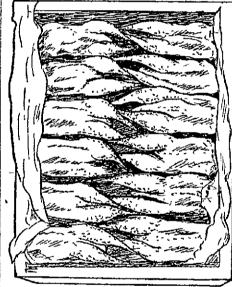

BEST SHIPMENT OF POULTRY

Many Processes Gone Through Before Product Reaches Consumer-Keep All Culis at Home.

(By F. E. MIXA.)

Before poultry reaches the consumer, it has to go through many proc From the farm the poultry is marketed as it runs; large, small, fat, lean, sick, and deformed. Verylittle attention is given to the quality of the product, yet it would be money in the pocket of the farmer were he to keep out the culls for his own use or dispose of those which were unfit

The shipping of poultry to a commission merchant or firm is quite a common practice-near large cities.

Chickens Packed Breast Up.

This seems to be quite a satisfactory way. It has advantages and disadvantages. A car of poultry shipped to New York city from Kansas City raises the price per pound from 31/2 to 4 cents, and before the consumer gets it, it is raised 11/2 to 2 cents more per pound. Yet the results obtained "Cut dead, dying, or crooked are usually in favor of this method of cerns have adequate facilities for handling both live and dressed poultry, thus assuring good care of the product until it has been sold. It is essential that the product be the best grade possible to get the best results.

PICK FEATHERS FROM GEESE

Operation Should Not Be Performed Until Warm Weather Sets In, Usually About May 20.

Geese should not be picked until warm weather sets in, usually about the back toward the person in order to prevent them from striking withtheir wings.

Draw a stocking over the bird's head while picking. Do not remove the feathers from the wings, shoulders and back as they are aceded to protect of checking, but firewood-will season the bird from the sun and rain.

LEGHORN IS MUCH IMPROVED

Tendency Has Been to Breed Larger Fowls and Still Retain Laying Characteristics.

The Leghorns today are a much better breed than they were years ago. The tendency has been to breed larger birds and still retain all their characteristics as producers of a large number of eggs. With larger bodies also has come the production of larger eggs which is an added merit to the breed.

EARTH, SAND-CLAY AND GRAVEL ROADS

(Prepared by the United States Depart- | section of a road surface depends on ment of Agriculture.)

Effective drainage usually should be the very first consideration in connection with the location and design of any road. This statement requires no explanation, because the action of water in changing clay into mud and in causing all kinds of soils, except sand. to give way when a load is applied, is familiar to every person living in a humid climate. The following sumnary supplies a few suggestions as to how water may best be removed from t road bed:

(a) It is desirable to get water away from the surface as quickly as practicable, so as to prevent the surface material from being softened by saturation or washed by water collecting in, and flowing along, ruts.

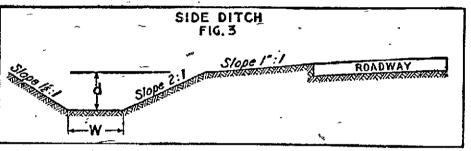

(b) It is desirable to keep the cross section of the road as flat as is consistent with good drainage, because traffic distributes itself over a flat road surface much better than over one that is heavily crowned, and an even distribution of traffic makes toward uniform wear and comparatively light maintenance. There is also less danger side ditches as rapidly as it falls on of skidding on a road of flat cross section than where the surface is crowned. SUFFICIENT FOOD FOR BEES [METHODS OF PLANTING CORN

Every Colony Should Have at Least Thirty Pounds of Honey---White Clover Is Favored.

Sufficient food is essential. Every colony should have at least 30 pounds of honey. White clover honey is best, although any white honey is good. Dark honey should be used sparingly; and honeydew honey not at all, on acrount of the waste it contains. Bees never deposit fecal waste in the hive. but retain it in the large intestine, where it causes dysentery unless soon passed out. In attempting to rid themselves of this, the bees fly forth on cold days, become chilled and never find their way back.

Higher Yields Obtained by Alternating With Early and Late Maturing Varieties of Crop.

Methods of planting corn by which one or two-rows of an early-maturing variety alternate with one or two rows of a later-maturing variety planted alone, according to the annual report of the bureau of plant industry. Where there is likely to be a shortage of moisture during certain periods of growing season, dependence should not be placed in a single variety: under such conditions two or three varieties which differ considerably in length of growing season should be grown.

EDUCATION AND THE WAR.

"It is of the utmost importance that there shall be no lowering in ESTABLISHED IN 1805 the efficiency of our systems of education" says Dr. P.P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, discussing education and the war.

"Schools and other agencies of education must be maintained at whatever cost and against all hurtful interference with their regular work except as may be necessary for the national defense. From the beginning of our participation in the war we should avoid the mistakes which some other countries have made to their hurt and which they are now trying to correct.

"If the war should be long and severe, there will be great need in its later days for many young men and women of scientific knowledge, training and skill; and it may then be much more difficult than it is now to support our schools, to spare our children and youth from other sar vice and to permit them to attend school. Therefore no school should close it's doors now or shorten it's term unnecessarily. All young men and women in college should remain and use their time to the very best advantage, except such as may find it necessary to loave for immediate profitable employment in some productive occupation or for the acceptance of some position in some branch of the military service, which position cannot be so well filled by someone else. All children in the elementary schools and as nearly as possible all high-school pupils should remain in school through the entire

"M nen the war is over, whether within a few months or after many years, there will be such demands upon this country for men and women of scientific knowledge, technical skill, and general culture as have never before come to any country. The world must be rebuil: This country must play a far more important part than it has in the past in agriculture, manufacturing and commerce, and also in the things of cultural life—art, literature, music, scientific discovery.

"It should be remembered that the number of students in our universities, colleges, normal schols, and techinal schols is very small as compared with the total number of persons of producing age-little more than one-half of one percent. The majority of these students are young men and women who are becoming more mature and fit for service. The older of the 60,000,000 men and women of producing age are growing more unfit and are passing beyond the age of service.

"Therefore a right conception of patriotism should induce all students who can not render immediate service of great value to remain in college, concentrate their energies on their college work, and thus be all the more ready and fit when their war or for the important work of re-Game when carried from one point construction and development in our

LESSON FOR JULY 15.

HEZEKIAH, THE FAITHFUL KING.

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 30:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that Migently seek him.—Heb. 11:6.

The reformation under Hezeklah is one of the bright and attractive spots in the latter his ory of the kingdom of Israel. It was a most thorough reformation and God set his seal upon it in many wonderful ways. Teachers ought to give their classes a comprehensive view of all that Hezekiah did, as recorded in II Chron., chapters I. Hezekiah's Proclamation. (vv.

1-6). The proper introduction to this lesson would be to return to chapter twenty-nine and note the restoration of the worship of Jehovah. How it began in one man's heart, Hezekiah; how he called the people to be clean (29:15), then called upon a cleansing of the house of God and its restoration (vv. 18, 19). How he called them to renewed sacrifice and worship (vv. 20, 21). The restoration of the sinoffering and of the burnt-offering, and the result of these offerings in the Levitical music and in the worship of the great congregation (29, 28). The sequel of song always follows and accompanies a true revival of religion. Having consecrated themselves unto the Lord, Hezekiah sends out this proclamation. The consecration of the people, as referred in chapter 29, was very complete. (See vv. 31-36.) Hezekiah was a man of deep discernment as well as of true piety. He saw the meaning of the sacrifice of redemption and put the passover forward as the very heart-center of the worship of Jehovah. (See vv. 1, 2.) Whoever understands the passover, understands God's way of salvation. (See Exodus 12:13-23; I Cor. 5:7, 8; Rom. 3:25, 26; John 1:29.) Hezekish did not confine his call to those of Israel alone, but extended it beyond its borders to those of Ephraim, thus manifesting the true missionary spirit. Hezekiah had ample Scriptural warrant keeping this passover out of its regular order (vv. 9-13). God is not a God of time or place. Wherever obedience is possible, whether it be a matter of time or not, God approves. Hezeklah, however, did not act upon his own initiative, but sought counsel. (See v. 2.) -The man who is the most clearly led of God is the man who is most eager and anxious to know how God is leading other men and will listen most patiently to their counsel. The fact that the people had not "gathered themselves together at Jerusalem" for a long time, might have warranted a further delay. Not so with this enthusiastic young king. He was not bound by precedent, but was anxious to please God. 13). Hezekiah began his exhortation by calling attention to the trespasses of their fathers (v. 7). At the same time he reminds them that if God gave them over to desolation because they themselves were stiff-necked (v. 8) and yielded not themselves unto the Lord to enter his sanctuary, which he Located in office of the late Frank had sanctified unto them, they would come under the fierceness of God's wrath, for they had turned from the Lord; they had "trespassed against the Lord God of their fathers." Because of that trespass God had "given them up to desolation." Literally he had made them "an astonishment." This astonishment and desolation was well known, "as ye see" (v. 7). Anyone with eyes open can see today the desolation of individuals, of families, communities and nations who trespass against God. For a generation we have had the deity of Christ and the inspiration of his Word called into question and that the individual man is the dictator of his own conscience and life, and it is because men have departed from their faithful allegiance to Jesus Christ and fail to obey his command, that we see the strife and desolation of today.

The first departure caused people to be "stiff-necked" and Jehovah is calling them to repentance, but they would not bear (see Ch. 36:13; Ex. 32:9; Rom. 10:21). In place of this "stiffneckness" of their hearts Hezekiah entreats them to turn again to the Lord and not to be stiff-necked as were their fathers (v. 8), that if they will apon this subject: "We are asked turn again unto the Lord (v. 9) they will find compassion so that they shall again enter his gracious and merciful dealings. Having yielded themselves they were to enter into communion with him and "enter into his sanetuary, which he had sanctified forever." They were also to serve him. Most blessed results were to follow for them and for their brethren and their children, but all of this bright prospect is conditioned upon repentance, surrender, communion and service, which is based upon the fact that Jehovah "is gracious and merciful" (Ex. 34:6, 7; Ps. 86:5; Jonah 4:2; Mark 7:18). Then, even as now, there were those who would not yield themselves to God's gracious invitation. As the priests passed through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun, they were "laughed to scorn and some mocked" (v. 10).

Organization of Roman Army. The Roman army was divided into legions, the number of which varied.

Each was under six tribuni or "chief captains," who commanded by turns. The legion was subdivided into ten cohorts, the cohort into three maniples, and the maniple into two centuries. The century originally contained 100 men, as the term implies, but subsequently from 50 to 300 men, according to the strength of the legion.

Polish Aids Shoes.

Some women de not realize that a walking shoe wears better and appears well for a longer time if it is frequently polished. A new street shoe oughtnot to be worn much until it is polished once, for without the polish it is much more liable to be scratched then with a good polish. Especially is this true of tan shoes...

Message to the Trenches

By John Elkins

(Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman.)

"I don't care how much I loved a man, if I found he was a coward that would settle it for me." Vera Garth spoke with considerable emphasis on the word "coward." The young man under the tree beside her looked questioningly in her face before

"Different people may have different meanings for that term 'coward,'" he

"It has but one meaning to me, in this case," she answered.

"I know-you think we are both talking about the same thing, but we're not. You are talking about heroism. I'm talking about war. I say war is just exactly what Sherman called it. The marvel to me is that in this year of our Lord, nearly twenty centuries since he came, that his words are entirely disregarded, and wholesale murder is sanctioned by sane men." "And with this country at war, you will not fight?" she questioned.

"I have not said that. If this country were invaded there would be but one thing to do. No man could see a wild beast falling upon a woman or child without springing to their aid. But I don't believe we will have war, and I don't believe in inviting it by our foolish words and deeds."

"Foolish!" she blazed out. "So it is foolish to be patriotic, to stand up for your country!"

'Not when it is right. But there is a bigger word than 'country,' and that is humanity."

Vera looked at Gilbert Lewis with something akin to contempt. She could not understand the fine distinction the young man made. Like thousands of others, she had fired up at the thought of "insult to the flag," love of country," etc., and had not gone beyond the boundaries of her own land to consider a world republic. In some ways she was undoubtedly right, but her mental equipment could not follow the line of Gilbert Lewis' thought; and they went on with the discussion till she became so exasperated that she exclaimed with intense disgust: "Well, I want you to understand I despise a coward!"

She had risen from the rustic seat, and turned away as she spoke. Her lone and manner roused something in Lewis that drove him to say: "Do you nean that for me?

"I hope it doesn't apply to you," she inswered, with a strong emphasis on the "hope."

"If you have any doubt-about me peing a coward I-I think there is nothing more to be said." He turned and walked away.

Vera, blazing with the heat of the liscussion, said nothing to call him pack. She loved him, and had told aim so when he asked her. But just low she was thinking of nothing but aer disappointment, as it seemed to aer, in the patriotism of the man she and placed so high.

Lewis, also disappointed in the uncomprehending mind of Vera, and aurt to the heart by her words, made to move toward reconciliation. And so. silence fell between them. Vera, with he pride which has been bred by the coolish convention of ages, would not nake the first move by acknowleding she wished for an amnesty, so two /oung people who really loved each ther, and whose hearts were breaking ver the separation, went their several ways, and tried to forget.

In less than three weeks Vera heard hat Lewis had sailed, in the interest of his firm, for England. Vera worked n the war relief societies, and indusriously knitted socks for the soldiers. One day a friend laughingly asked her she was knitting them for Gilbert Lewis. Vera flushed and answered sharply: "I thought you knew these vere for soldiers!"

The girl answered quite as sharply: Well, didn't you know he was one? Le's in the trenches in France now."

One day a case of necessary articles from far-off American came to the boys in the trenches. One of them in high glee put on the pair of fine wool socks handed to him.

"Wy word!" he exclaimed, "What's that in the toe?"

Quickly drawing off the sock, he extracted a piece of folded paper, opened it and read with a smile that lengthened into a hearty laugh. Then he read aloud to the others the lines: "I hope these socks will fit G. L.

If he is at the front. But if he's not, why then-Oh, well, They'll do their little stunt Upon some other hero's feet, But never help in a retreat."

"Hello! who's 'G. L.?' " called out the reader of the note. "What fellow has those initials? He can have the note, but not the socks!"

"They're mine!" laughed Lewis, "but it isn't meant for me." "Hold on!" cried the other. "Here's name! Vera M. G." Lewis held out his hand for the bit of paper. "It is for me," he said in a low voice. The other, seeing his face, said: "Here, pal! the socks are, too."

One day a note came to Vera from Mrs. Lewis saying she would like to see her. The girl sank down completely unnerved. What if something terrible had happened to Gilbert! How could she face his mother? She had never met Mrs. Lewis. Perhaps she might think her in some way responsible for his going to the front. But summoned up her courage and went. The mother showed her a copy of her little rhyme, and told her how glad he had been to get it, and read her his letter. In it he had said he was not there because he believed in war, but for another reason. Vera wondered what the other reason was.

It was over a month when Mrs. Lewis sent for her again. The instant she saw the woman's face she divined what had happened.

"Tell me!" she almost shricked, 'tell me what has happened?"

"He is missing. They did not let me know—because they hoped to hear something—but now—they seem to have given him up."

"Oh, no! no!" sobbed Vera. "I can't, I won't, believe it!"

The two women wept together, and the elder one knew then how the girl had loved him.

One day a London postmarked letter came to Mrs. Lewis. It was signed by a woman's name unfamiliar to her, The letter ran: "From one mother son was brought home from France his death would also prove to be trenches so as to prevent disease mine. One day your son asked George should go and take his place. At once George brightened up and asked him if he would, and would he tell the boys in his company how he longed to get that he had kept his word. "George rallied, so that he was able the hope that any blame you may feel for my daughter and myself for having without any intention in a way caused your son to go to the front, may it was the saving of two lives. You sorrow. must indeed be uplifted! You must be very proud to be the mother of such a son. He was dear, too, to us; and it is because of this the mother of another hero speaks to you."

Again the women wept together, The tone of the letter so surely meant that all hope was gone.

Vera went home with many new into her brain. No doubt he had

These thoughts drove Vera to sleepless nights and harrowing days, so that her only hope of remaining sane seemed to get away for a time to other scenes. But even that did not help, so she returned before she had expected ease both at home and in our mili-

She sought at once the Lewis home. The mother meeting her, and seeing the drawn, haggard face of the girl, felt she must break what she had to say with some tact. "I have news," she said.

"Oh. quick! quick! tell me!" sobbed he giri. "He was taken prisoner, and-"

"Mother! I can't wait!" cried a volce just back of her, and Gilbert Lewis held the girl he loved in his

ittle Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D. LL. D. Commissioner of Health

Before the causes of diseases were known or the practical application of Nature's ways of producing immunity to disease, we had to suffer an attack of sickness and then trust to drugs and nursing for cure,

This was a difficult task and the death rate was sometimes enormous, both in times of peace as well as of

Then the day of prevention came. Gradually the laws of Nature were unfolded until today we know methods of preventing diseases and antidoting the poisons generated by germs in the body.

It was even as late as the Spanish-American War that we lost more to another whose son has been offered soldiers from preventable diseases up in the great sacrifice. Eggs Indispensable for Wounded Soldiers Experience war torn Europe is showing that meat can be done withcut by the civil population but when it comes to the invalided and wounded soldiers, eggs and milk are indispensable.

On account of the wholesale killing off of poultry throughout the State on account of late high grain prices including the sacrificing of tens of thousands of still perfectly good laying hens, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is making heroic efforts to stop this waste of good hens and it wishes to remind all poultry keepers that saving a good hen this year may save a human life next year.

To kill on aneamic, stale, broken down and useless hens is to save for other uses much needed grain and is something the Department is encouraging, but the fact that there is going to be a terrific shortage of eggs the next few years seems sure and it dare not be so short as to im- horny or highest form of sponges. peril the recovery of any soldier boy.
